By LEIF ERICKSON
Guam, April 7 (AP) — Six Japanese warships, including their largest remaining battleship—the 45,000 ton Yamato, and 391 enemy planes were destroyed in a two-day battle between planes and surface units of the two fleets yesterday and today. Only 50 miles from Japan, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced.

Three United States destroyers were sunk, several others and some smaller craft damaged. Seven planes were lost.

Attack Enemy Unit

The battle opened Friday afternoon when heavy forces of Japanese planes attacked United States ships and shore installations in the vicinity of Okinawa. Three destroyers were sunk and several damaged. One hundred and sixteen of the attacking planes were shot down. No larger fleet units were hit.

Early today Navy search aircraft sighted an enemy surface force at a point about 50 miles southwest of Kyushu, southernmost Japanese island. Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitschers first carrier force steamed toward the enemy and during the middle of the day brought the enemy under aerial attack.

No air opposition was met but heavy antiaircraft fire greeted Mitschers' airmen as they bored in to the attack.

The Yamato, reported damaged last month in a carrier raid on Japan's inland sea and last October in the battle of Leyte Gulf when her sister ship, the Musashi was sunk, went down after being hit by eight torpedoes and eight bombs.

The continuing attack finished off the light Agano class cruiser, the small cruiser and three destroyers. Three destroyers were left burning and about three others escaped the attack. All of the ships were strafed heavily with rockets and machine guns.

Seven carrier aircraft were lost in this action.

REPORT DAMAGE TO U S PROPERTY

Dr. Henry Stewart, local official observer for the U. S. Weather Bureau, reported today that vandals broke one of the recording thermometers at his weather observation station at the rear of 227 Carlisle street, Breidenbaugh apartments.

The thermometer broken was the one which recorded maximum temperatures, and as Doctor Stewart had only one of that type, the weather records for Gettysburg will be incomplete during the time it takes the U. S. Weather Bureau to send a second thermometer here.

The vandalism probably was the work of youngsters who play through the yard at the rear of the Carlisle street property, and Doctor Stewart warned parents against allowing their children to romp through the grounds.

Destruction of United States government property is a serious offense and carries a heavy fine and imprisonment upon conviction. Doctor Stewart declared that the several days' break in the hitherto complete records will have been of greater loss than the monetary value of the thermometer.

However, he stated that because of the destruction to the government property and the resulting inconvenience and incompleteness of the government records, "such vandalism to the recording station can not be tolerated." Full disciplinary measures will be taken with any offenders who are apprehended, he said.

FRUIT DAMAGE INCREASED BY SECOND FREEZE

Another heavy frost, of longer duration than the one Thursday night, covered most of the county Friday night and early this morning as the temperatures struck the same low as the preceding 24-hour period.

The Arendtsville fruit laboratory weather station showed a minimum of 26½ degrees again, while the official thermometer of Dr. Henry Stewart, observer in Gettysburg, recorded 31½ degrees for the second consecutive night.

Officials at Arendtsville reported that the frost this morning was much heavier and lasted for about seven hours as against the four hours on Thursday night.

"There is no doubt that considerable damage resulted from last night's frost," the Arendtsville station officials stated this morning. "However, it is too early to risk a general prediction about the crop damage."

Total Loss Some Places

"Although quite a few buds were killed last night," the Arendtsville men continued, "it will require some time to determine the exact percentage. There usually are too many buds on fruit trees, and in spots where the frost did not hit so heavily the damage may not have been at all great to the ultimate crop."

"However in the low areas where the frost was very heavy, some growers may have suffered total loss. Successive frosts will cause even more damage because of the progression of the buds. As they move into the tender stages, subsequent freezing weather will cause very severe damage."

The early weather forecast this morning called for "clear and not so cold tonight with Sunday mostly sunny and continued mild," and growers expressed the hope that there would be no frost in the orchard areas.

DAR CHAPTER HOLDS MEETING

The April meeting of the Gettysburg chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John D. Lippy, Sr., with Mrs. R. S. Saby, regent, presiding. Reports by the regent and officers were given.

Mrs. Walter H. Danforth read a paper on "The Life of Florence Nightingale" from information taken from the files of the DAR stationing library of which Mrs. C. E. Bilheimer is chairman of the filing and lending committee.

Mrs. Danforth also gave a brief resume of the life of Clara Barton and drew a parallel in their work as nurses in Europe and America. Mrs. Danforth revealed that she visited the grave of Miss Barton in Oxford, Mass., some time ago and was amazed to find that only an insignificant stone marks the grave of the founder of the Red Cross.

In addition to Mrs. Lippy, the hostess committee included Mrs. C. Richard Wolff, Mrs. Guile W. Leffer, Mrs. Albert Partner, Miss Verna Schwartz, Mrs. Frank Peckman, Miss Grace Sachs and Mrs. Victor Dutera.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Edgar L. Dear-dorf, Carlisle street, Friday, May 4.

Few Radios Or Irons Until Japan Is Beaten

(Last of five articles)
By ELTON C. FAY AND JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, April 7 (AP)—There will be some reconversion of industry to civilian production when the European war ends, but it will be a long time before you can walk into your neighborhood store and order a refrigerator, a radio or an electric iron.

Just how long this time will be is uncertain. Chairman J. A. Krug of the War production board predicts every civilian product will be back in production within a year after V-E Day and that most will be on the market.

The war and navy departments are holding firm to their contention that until Japan is beaten the output of American factories must stay geared to the needs of war.

Trend to Non-War Jobs

Along with growing pressure by management to go into peacetime production is a trend by war plant workers to drift into non-war jobs. The reason may be in part the de-

WITHHOLD PART OF NEXT BOND QUOTA FIGURES

With only the quota for individual purchases of bonds in the county in the Seventh War Loan drive yet disclosed, G. Ruhland Rebman, chairman of the Pennsylvania State War Finance committee, has informed Edmund W. Thomas, Adams county War Finance committee chairman, that the quota of bonds to be sold to all other non-banking sources will not be announced before June 1, 1945.

In announcing the $1,460,000 bond sale quota for individuals in the county in the Seventh War Loan drive, Mr. Thomas said today it should be kept in mind that of this amount $700,000 is the E bond quota. "That means," he said, "that we must sell $700,000 E bonds to individuals and $760,000 of all other bonds eligible for individual purchasers to individuals."

Mr. Thomas made this further statement in connection with the approaching bond-selling campaign.

"The amount of E bonds to be sold to individuals is greater in the Seventh War Loan drive than at any time in any of the previous six drives. That is one reason why they are starting the drive for the sale of E, F, and G bonds and the Series C savings notes as early as April 9 and why they are continuing it to July 7.

Asks Daily Reports

"I would urge all issuing agents to please advise the office of the county chairman daily of their sales of Series E, F, and G bonds and Series C savings notes. Failure to do this daily will make it difficult for those who are at the active head of any division to know where the county stands from day to day in attaining its quota. Failure to make these reports daily will make it necessary for the office of county chairman to contact issuing agents from day to day. This will entail unnecessary labor, time, and expense; and it is my earnest hope that our loyal, faithful, hard-working issuing agents will bear this in mind and mail in their reports every day.

"The war is not over, by any means, at this time. Even when (Please Turn to Page 2)

Lincoln Chair Returns Mysteriously To Campus

An historic chair that disappeared mysteriously from a dusty museum at Gettysburg college more than two decades ago has returned to the campus amid circumstances even more unusual.

The little old rocking chair that Abraham Lincoln is reputed to have used on the platform in the National cemetery November 19, 1863, when he delivered his deathless Gettysburg address, has come back to the sanctuary of the college campus after an absence of close to a quarter century.

No public ado was made when the chair "turned up missing" in the college museum in the early twenties. College officials knew the chair had disappeared but there was nothing to indicate its whereabouts—and little reason to hope that it might ever be recovered.

A few weeks ago Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, the college president, received an anonymous letter from Charleston, W. Va., stating that "the Lincoln chair" was in that city

Two British armored columns whipped forward today 12 miles from the port of Bremen, and to the south the German high command said the Nazis were locked in a heavy battle with the U. S. Third Army east of Muehlhausen and near the Eisleben area, where the Germans yesterday reported airborne landings within 90 miles of Berlin.

The swift British tank drive, aimed toward Hamburg, Germany's third city, outflanked Bremen and drove closer to the Weser, already crossed to the south by Americans and other British. American First Army troops surged another seven miles eastward on a 35-mile front 12 miles east of captured Kassel. As Allied power snowballed across Germany, Nazis were sent to prisoner cages by the thousands.

Reds Clearing Vienna

The Red Army began the job of driving the Germans from Vienna, a Moscow dispatch said. As Soviet storm columns on the south and southeast limits of the Austrian capital pushed relentlessly northward in the building-to-building battle—some presumably within the city proper—there were what Moscow account called "good indications" that the Nazis faced encirclement unless they made an early withdrawal.

The twin British columns of the Seventh Armored Division struck northeast from Diepholz and Wagenfeld to Buecken, 22 miles from Bremen and 60 from Hamburg on the Elbe, and units were in Schwaförden, astride important crossroads due south of the great river port.

At the same time Canadian armored forces were only nine miles from cutting off the last rail line to western Holland and 35 miles from the North sea in a double-barreled drive to seal off all German forces in Holland.

First Surges Ahead

East of the Weser British and Americans enlarged their bridgeheads, some units within 18 miles of strategic Hannover, and south of them the U. S. First Army's power drive, carrying almost to the Weser's headwaters, surged eastward through the Hessian gap. Behind these advances the First and Ninth Armies hacked away at tightly trapped Nazis in the Ruhr. Hamm, the rail center, fell.

There was no confirmation of the German report that airborne troops were at Eisleben, only 90 miles from Berlin, far ahead of U. S. Third Army spearheads which have advanced to the area of Keula, eight miles north of Muehlhausen, and Langensalza, 10 miles north of Gotha. The Third has been reported 130 miles from Berlin and 58 from the Czechoslovak border.

Heavy Fighting In Vienna

Wuerzburg was finally cleared by the U. S. Seventh Army, and Heilbronn was partially cleared. In the first five days of April the Germans lost prisoners at the rate of 25,000 or more a day. The five-day total was 146,000 captured on the Western Front, with probably 20,000 more killed or seriously wounded. At this rate of casualties there seemed little chance of a German concerted stand on the Elbe river, which flows 50 miles from Berlin and about 100 from the Russian lines.

The Russians in Vienna met a heavy curtain of mortar and sniper fire, but a Moscow dispatch said the Red Army power appeared to be too much for the defenders, battling for each house. Heavy engagements were reported in the western suburbs, and Russian infantry in large numbers was being moved up to back up the storm units which battered into the city defenses.

Veterans of Stalingrad and Budapest were reported four miles from St. Stephan's church in the middle of the city.

Fifth Attacking

Other Russians have reached Vienna's northeast approaches at the Morava river barrier on a 37-mile front. The big Schwechat aircraft assembly center was captured and a number of suburban communities fell to the Third Ukraine Army. At the same time the Second Ukrainian Army, driving swiftly from the Bratislava gap, toppled suburbs 12 and 13 miles southeast of Vienna's heart and was surging ahead with massed armor. Gun-fire could be heard over the Vienna radio.

In Czechoslovakia the Russians were 38 miles from Brno (Brno), big industrial city. In Yugoslavia, Soviet cavalrymen were 41 miles from Zagreb, Croat capital, and free Yugoslav radio reports said partisan forces had captured Sarajevo, scene of the assassination which touched off World War I.

In western Italy U. S. Fifth Army troops attacking on the Ligurian coast sector with the support of two British destroyers and swarms of American planes, captured Monte Poligorio, a dominating position 19½ miles southeast of La Spezia, and drove forward against scattered resistance.

EXPLAINS NAZIS' STRONG STAND ON EAST FRONT

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (Associated Press War Analyst)

"The fierceness of the German resistance to the Russian assault on Vienna gives special point to a question which has been put to me many times recently—why have the Hitlerites defended their Eastern front so much more strongly than they have the Rhineland?"

There are several reasons for this German strategy which much of the time has maintained on the Russian front double the number of troops opposite the western Allies—sometimes more than double. The popular supposition is that the Germans are afraid of the retribution which the Russians might exact for the German atrocities in Soviet territory—and that certainly is one potent reason. The Nazis have massacred, pillaged and burned, and carried away countless civilians to the Reich for slave labor. There's blood on the German moon.

Deadly Fear of Reds

Along this same line of thought from the moment Hitler came to power he began to instill terror of the "Bolsheviks" in his people. It was one of the keystones of his power. Daily he shouted his guttural warnings until he succeeded so well that many folk were in deadly fear of the Russians. The situation became such that an invasion of the Red Armies might result in a crack of civilian morale.

However, that's not the whole story. The Hitlerian intuition figured that the western Allies could be stood off much easier than the Russians because of the nature of the Reich's inner fortress. The Oder line of defenses along the eastern frontier were powerful, but the much-sung Siegfried fortifications, backed by the mighty Rhine, were supposed to be impregnable.

Then too the Oder line was vastly nearer Berlin and the heart of the country than were the Rhineland defenses. Actually the Oder directly east of the capital is only about 25 miles away, whereas the corresponding Rhineland fortifications were some ten times that distance. Consequently a major break-through on the Oder would, in theory at least be much more dangerous than a rupture of the western line.

the good news that Germany has collapsed and has been completely overrun and occupied by Allied armies has finally come, we will still have ahead of us a tough and a costly war with Japan. Let everyone please bear in mind that the distances between this country and the points of attack on Japan make the war on the Nips more expensive.

"Over and above all this, however, I am sure that the good, patriotic people of Adams county will remember that the thought uppermost in the minds of all of us is to save the lives of our American boys and to end the war decisively and as promptly as possible. I feel confident that our people in Adams county will muster the same support for their boys in the Seventh War Loan drive that they have given all previous six drives."

JAPS ROUTED FROM PITS BY BURNING OIL

Manila, April 7 (AP)—American engineers are burning Japanese from concrete pits and tunnels on rocky Caballo island by a modern adaptation of the medieval technique of pouring boiling oil on the enemy from castle walls.

Caballo is Corregidor's barren little brother at the entrance to Manila bay.

The pits, built by Americans before the war, are 30 feet square and 20 deep with a 12-foot thick concrete wall. Steel doors block tunnel entrances. Americans tried desperately for nine days to root out the Japanese. Alternately they showered the pits with grenades, mortars, dynamite charges and naval and land artillery fire. They poured burning chemical from fire bombs down the vents without apparent effect.

Technical experts desperately sought a solution. Finally an unidentified soldier suggested oil might work.

A huge pump was rigged with 1,000 feet of semi-flexible pipe. It was run up Caballo's rocky face while infantrymen fired to keep the Japanese under cover.

The pump spewed a mixture of oil and gasoline into a pit. It gushed out through a drain in the side of the cliff. Soldiers set it afire with tracer bullets and phosphorus shells lit the oil in the pit, making a roaring inferno above and below.

The heat from 2,400 gallons of flaming oil set off heavy explosions inside the tunnels. The heat treatment ended fire from that pit.

11 Women On Jury For Chaplin Suit

Los Angeles, April 7 (AP)—A lone man will sit in the jury box with 11 women to hear the retrial of Joan Berry's paternity suit against Charlie Chaplin.

The man, Cecil A. Croxen, formerly of Oshkosh, Wis., and the women have been sworn in and will begin hearing testimony Monday in the new trial of the case which ended in a jury disagreement last January.

Attorney Joseph Scott, representing the 25-year-old Miss Berry, told the jury that "this case is that of the baby versus Chaplin; the sole issue is whether or not he is her father, and Joan Berry is just an important witness."

Miss Berry, Chaplin's former dramatic student, contends that the film comic is the father of her baby, Carol Ann, 18 months.

Gas Situation After V-E Day Is Uncertain

Washington, April 7 (AP) — A 50 per cent increase in gasoline rations after V-E Day depends on how the Petroleum Administration for War's estimate of additional supplies turns out.

Price Administrator Chester Bowles, in a statement last night, said if PAW's top calculation—an additional 200,000 barrels a day—materializes, "A" card motorists will get sufficient gas for six miles of driving daily after Germany's defeat. The present ration is four miles.

But if the extra supply made available is PAW's minimum estimate—100,000 barrels daily—the additional allotments "would, of course, be much smaller," Bowles said.

The same goes for "B" drivers, who in any event are slated for only a "limited increase."

can be opened from Europe to the Pacific.

First to gush out to the Pacific will be new goods produced in the United States. Then out of the secondary pipeline, will flow the guns, tanks, shells, planes and all the other things which have not been used up in Europe and which are still useful against the Japanese.

There should be little need for great quantities of the heavier tanks against Japan's light armor. Requirements for short range bombers and certain types of fighter planes will diminish. This doesn't mean that the workers in plants producing such items won't be needed.

The demand for vehicles to replace those lost in Europe will be great. Pacific battles will take their toll of ordinance and ammunition. If few light and medium bombers are required, more long range bombers and carrier-borne plans will be needed.

Many Months of War Work

The army will increase its take of cotton goods for clothing and tents. It will need more rockets and rocket-launching equipment, artillery and artillery ammunition, more heavy duty tires.

The war worker asks: "When am I going to be out of a job?"

Broadly the answer is: "Not for many months yet unless Japan folds up with unexpected speed. If you lose your present job, another one is waiting."

This is true for both the eastern and western sections of the country. General questions about reconversion cannot be answered exactly except in reference to time.

James F. Byrnes, resigned director of War Mobilization and reconversion, said last week-end that he expects 20 per cent of the nation's war production facilities will be released during the first three months after V-E. He estimated this would mount to 30 per cent by nine months after.

Intricate Switch-over

This talk of cutbacks, of course, breaks down into very real problems for plant owners. They want to keep their machines going, their workers employed, their profits coming in. The extent to which they are able to do this will mean jobs and wages not only for the workers now making munitions but also for the men coming home from overseas to stay after V-E Day.

To meet these problems, the army, navy, War Production Board and other government agencies have organized, an elaborate piece of contract cancellation machinery.

The seeming remoteness of the Pacific war, the tasks now close at hand that V-E Day will bring, the yearning of families to have their sons and fathers home—all are part of the intricate pattern of the switch-over from war to peace.

The one thing that seems absolutely certain is that if this pattern is to be prevented from becoming a mad tangle of economic distress, unemployment and deep unhappiness, the statesmanship of victory will have to be every bit as courageous and far-sighted as the statesmanship of war.

"MARY" IS 90 NOW

ROOKIE LIKELY THIRD SACKER FOR CLEVELAND

New York, April 7 (AP)—Bob Rothel, a 21-year-old rookie third baseman from Batavia in the pony league, probably will open the baseball season at the "hot corner" for the Cleveland Indians.

He drew high praise from Manager Lou Boudreau after cracking out three hits, including a triple, in the last intra-squad game at Lafayette, Ind.

"Can't say from one training game to another," Lou asserted. "But right now Rothel is my choice to open the season."

Other training camp items:

Philadelphia Phillies—Outfielder Vince DiMaggio, recently obtained from Pittsburgh in a trade, reported at Wilmington, Del., camp anxious to get into uniform and play.

Chicago White Sox—Thornton Lee and Johnny Johnson nominated to pitch exhibition game against Detroit Tigers today.

Chicago Cubs—Bruins moved into Louisville today to meet American Association Colonels.

Philadelphia A's—First baseman Flibber McGhee arrived at Frederick, Md., camp. Said laid in reporting was due to waiting until his son was born.

Homers in Ninth

Pittsburgh Pirates—Art Cucurullo, Ken Gables and Al Gerheuser were slated to pitch today against Muncie, Ind., Gas City team.

Cincinnati Reds—Homer by outfielder Dick Sipek with two out in ninth gave Reds 5-4 triumph over Cubs.

Boston Braves—Johnny Hutchings, big 250-pound twirler, was scheduled to pitch against Senators today.

Boston Red Sox—Rookie second sacker Jack Tobin showed speed in traveling in all directions against Yankees.

Brooklyn Dodgers—Two Negro players, Terrill McDuffie and Showboat Thomas, appeared at Bear Mountain camp, but club officials said it was impossible to comply with their request for a tryout because the day's program had already been arranged.

New York Yankees—Infielder George Stirmweiss clouted a homer as Yanks lost to Red Sox.

New York Giants—Sent right-hander Bob Barthelston to San Francisco of the Pacific Coast league on option.

Hershey, Cleveland In Important Clash

Hershey, Pa., April 7 (AP)—Winner of two games in the American Hockey League championship play-offs, Hershey Bears meet the Cleveland Barons in the fourth game of the series in the sports arena here tonight.

Cooney Welland's Bears are credited with 10 goals and four team points in the three series games played thus far. Bun Cook's Barons have seven goals and two points. Eight points are needed for victory.

Cook tonight will use on the forward line: Cunningham, Prokop, Trudel; Burlington, Bartholome and Gasparini; and Agar, Forgie and Fraser.

The Barons' first and second lines contain four of the leading scorers of the American league. Trudel ranks second high in the season's point-making, with Burlington, Bartholome and Cunningham in third, fourth and fifth places, respectively.

Byron Nelson In Six-Stroke Lead

Atlanta, April 7 (AP)—Byron Nelson, the mechanical man of golf, today went into the third round of the $10,000 Iron Lung tournament with a six-stroke lead in bidding for his eighth victory of the winter tour.

He turned the first nine of yesterday's play with a 33, two strokes under, but blew the margin coming back and took a 36, ending with even par, 69 to go with his opening round 64.

Sammy Byrd, who gave up major league baseball for golf in 1936, had the meet's best card yesterday, a 65, giving him a halfway total of 139 for second place.

The big money winners, Sammy Sneed, the slammer from Hot Springs, Va., who is seeking his seventh victory, and Harold "Jug" McSpaden of Sanford, Me., fell behind with mediocre rounds.

Browns, Cardinals Open Series Today

St. Louis, April 7 (AP)—The American league champion St. Louis Browns will meet the world champion St. Louis Cardinals in a seven-game series starting today in an effort to reverse the National league's 4-2 decision in the 1944 World series.

Both clubs are likely choices to meet again in this year's fall classic. Neither Manager Luke Sewell nor Billy Southworth ventured any predictions on outcome of the annual city affair, Southworth adding that "you can never tell about those Browns."

Two newcomers who hold the key to much of the Browns' hope for a second consecutive pennant will start in outfield. Pete Gray, one-armed rookie from Memphis, will

Coaching Jobs Open In National Grid Loop

New York, April 7 (AP)—Two head coaching jobs were open in the National football league Friday as the club owners went into their annual player draft session before taking up problems facing the teams in another wartime season.

Brooklyn, which probably will merge with the Boston Yanks under coach Herb Kopf, had no head man of its own and the Pittsburgh Steelers had named no successor to Walt Kiesling. Big Jim Leonard, line coach under Kiesling, was believed to be the likely choice but co-owner Bert Bell said no announcement would be made until Sunday or Monday.

Three clubs were tied for the right to make first selection—Brooklyn, and the Chicago Cardinals and Pittsburgh which had operated as a merged unit in 1944.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, April 7 (AP)—Joe McCarthy, the no-longer silent manager of the Yankees, says that baseball will look better this year because the players won't be trying to fill the shoes of a departed star. Last season, Joe explains, the kids were trying to bear down too hard and as a result didn't settle down and play their own game until mid-season. . . . He might have added that it will look better to the fans because instead of thinking of the departed DiMaggios, Williamses and Fellers, they'll be comparing this year's crop with the Bums who wore major league uniforms last season. . . . The gates surrounding the Giant's training quarters at Lakewood, N. J., are locked at mid-night—not to keep the players in but to keep the deer out. . . . Gosh, we knew some of those boys were green—but.

SHORTS AND SHELLS
The once-adjourned National football league meeting has gone through an entire day and so far George (Wetwash) Marshall hasn't walked out because it was "illegal."

Growing Sorghum for Sirup
With continued sugar rationing in prospect for at least most of the coming year, farmers may find it profitable to increase sorghum acreage again. Throughout most of the east and middle west last fall sorghum molasses brought prices ranging from $1.25 to $1.50 a gallon. The editor knows many growers who sold their entire output at the roadside at $1.50 a gallon and found demands far exceeding supplies. For home consumption as well as marketing, sorghum cane is a worthwhile crop.

Planting is not done until the soil is warm, preferably after corn planting in May. But soils for sorghum should be prepared at least a month before planting time in order to furnish a firm seed bed. In fact, large growers practice fall plowing, with frequent spring harrowings to keep weeds removed and the surface mellow until time to plant. But plowing early in April usually proves satisfactory.

Sorghums are divided into three main groups—grain varieties for livestock feeding, broom corn, and the sweet or sirup-making sorts. There are several varieties or strains among sweet sorghums, although Amber, Orange and perhaps a few related varieties are the most widely grown. In fact, it is largely a matter of selecting a variety with early-maturing habits, as growers face a two-fold problem—to start the crop after soils are warm and to bring the crop to maturity before frost dangers arrive in September. The Amber, for example, reaches harvest size in 80 to 100 days after planting; the heavier-stalked Orange strains require 15 to 20 days longer.

Fertilizer requirements vary among different types of soil, but in most cases a complete fertilizer is profitably beneficial, one with a high percentage of phosphoric acid. Many experienced growers believe that every grower must make years of tests to determine the best relationships of fertilizer kinds and amounts to promote maximum juice yields. One of the most successful growers the writer knows claims that molasses flavor, as well as sap yields, is influenced by the kind of fertilizer used.

Needs Cultivation
Soil must be warm at planting time. The seed bed must be firm with a mellow, finely worked surface. Seed should be planted in a furrow to permit later working of soil around the plants and thereby promote deeper rooting to reduce drought injuries in mid-summer. Seed should not be covered deeper than two inches in lighter types of loam and no more than one inch in heavier clay loams.

Unlike requirements of most other crops, sorghum demands cultivation for other than weed control. Frequent and shallow tillage appears to increase juice yields. Keep all weeds eradicated. An occasional harrowing of early plowed land will destroy many newly germinated weed seeds.

Persons interested in growing sorghum and making the tasty healthful molasses should write The U. S. Department of Agriculture, Office of Information, Washington 25, D. C., for free copies of Farmers' Bulletin 1619—Sorgo for Sirup. Of course, the editor will be glad to answer all related questions.

Bird lovers find heads of sorghum grain an excellent over-winter feed especially for such upland game birds as quail. The bagasse makes excellent material for strawberries and bramble fruits, also for green manure.

Maple Leafs Down
Detroit In Opener

Detroit, April 7 (AP)—The Detroit Red Wings, who started the Stanley cup hockey final series last night confident of victory, found themselves one game down today to a team that had been able to defeat them only once in the regular season.

The third-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who conquered the champion Montreal Canadiens in the semi-final series, blanked the Red Wings last night with a hard-checking, massed defense and easily coasted to a 1-0 victory on Dave (Sweeney) Schirmer's first period goal.

SEE CHANGES IN DRAFT LIMITS

Washington, April 7 (AP)—Two more big punctures in the much-riddled 30 per cent limit for draft deferments of young war workers are in prospect.

The War Production Board and the Petroleum Administration for War have submitted new requests in the growing clamor for relief from the draft's pinch.

WPB has asked the so-called McNutt committee for an additional "kitty" of 28,000 workers above the 30 per cent ceiling, while the petroleum industry has petitioned for the deferment of 60 to 65 per cent of its 28,000 2-A and 2-B workers under 30.

The committee, headed by War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, maintained its usual silence, but it appeared probable these

The 30 per cent limit was set six weeks ago to protect a "vital hard core" of younger industrial workers. It hardly had been fixed, however, when a series of exceptions developed. Some industries have been approved for deferments up to 95 per cent of their labor force under 30.

Just Folks

THE QUIET MAN
The world's way is to strut a bit, but quietly, far back, he'd sit. And watch the clever, bold and loud. Attract attention from the crowd.

The world's way is to make the most of everything with pompous boast, but very simple he remained. And from all talk of self refrained.

And we remember, now he's dead. That once to us he softly said: "If man does well he needn't shout. The world will surely find it out."

"The noise men make to naught amounts; It's just the job they do that counts. It's by the men at every gun. And not by trumpets wars are won."

Today's Talk

THE SEARCH FOR COMPANIONSHIP

What a lonely lot of folks so many of us are, anyway! Each searching, hoping and praying for a genuine companion—an understanding pal—a friend without capitulation.

Where does the trouble lie, that in a world so full of people there are so few that we ever come to know, or to whom we can open every door to our heart? Selfishness probably rules more people than any other single thing. And what a havoc of companionship resentments make!

Eddie Guest once wrote a famous poem about what a "Heap o'Living" it took "to make a Home." Well, it certainly takes as much to make a friend or a companion fit and worthy for one to take along with him to the end of the trail.

We search, we hunger, and we grieve for companionship. Without it life becomes a very bitter affair. In all nature there are associations. Where one bird decides to go, others go in order to gain companionship. What a picture of silent beauty is that of two happy birds sitting together upon the branch of a tree or some solid place.

In the Bible is told many a story of this companionship—David and Jonathan, Mary and Martha, Jesus, and John, "the beloved." There is no more inspiring companionship than that of Father and Son.

We can bear so much, we can climb with so much more hope and confidence if we know that "just around the corner" is to be found a friend, tried and true. But what a rare find is that one!

"Many of the world's great have been exceedingly lonely men. Their search for companionship, a life-long search, ending in disappointment. There are those with whom we can be happy in companionship for hours, without the uttering of a single word, so full of understanding can such companionship be."

But regardless of the rarity of great and perfect companionship, it does exist, and it can be yours, and it can be mine. We must not expect to find it however, to a greater degree than it exists within ourselves.

Use for Brake Fluid

On a number of occasions I have cautioned against using any sort of petroleum lubricant for softening rubber parts such as spring shackles, shock absorber bushings and motor supports. There are special lubes for rubber, but if you are not able to obtain them at your auto supply store one of the authorized brake fluids will do just as well. A little of such fluid squirted over the rubber parts will be very effective in checking squeaks and groans, and without inflicting any damage.

What breaks valve springs?

That has puzzled a lot of motorists, yet the explanation is relatively simple. Breakage results from corrosion of the metal of the springs. This, in turn, is due to moisture and acids forming in the crankcase and valve compartment, especially in cold weather when the engine doesn't have sufficient time to warm up and when oil does not thin out enough to protect the more remote parts of the engine. The resulting condensate causes an accumulation of sludge in the oiling system. This, too, is corrosive.

Along comes summer, higher speed driving and spring breakage. Bear in mind, however, that valve springs can break from other causes such as surge, flutter at high speeds and the general loss of tension, especially in the case of the exhausts.

Dope on "Dopes"

In spite of all that has been written and said on the subject readers are still telling me that they believe a few moth balls in the gas tank not only boost mileage but provide better engine operation. Take it from me, unequivocally, gasoline "dopes" are worthless. This is the consensus of the oil industry, the AAA, many Better Business bureaus and the United States Bureau of Standards. Some 150 brands of dopes have been tested. The trick in most of them is the suggestion to dope users to adjust the carburetor for a leaner idling mixture. Moth balls are a crude naphthalene and are of no value in gasoline even in concentrations much higher than that provided by the usual dopes. None of this should in any way be confused with tetraethyl fluid which is used in gasoline to boost octane rating. This is an entirely different story.

In cases where it seems impossible to prevent grease from working through the right rear wheel and brake drum the smart service man suspects that there is something wrong with the axle housing or the axle shaft. Either may be bent. In such a situation the oil seal, no matter how good or how well installed, will act as something of a pump to force the oil out.

In some cars where lube can work down the propeller shaft tube to the rear end the oil seal is simply overtaken by the excess of lube. To check this condition make sure that the oil return hole in the retainer of the rear ball bearing of the transmission is open, otherwise lube won't flow back into the transmission.

Where He Erred

H. N. has been troubled for some time with a springy, spongy brake pedal. Three times he has bled off the brake lines and very wisely used new fluid on the theory that the old fluid contained air bubbles. Apparently there was no leakage in the system, yet that characteristic pedal action continued to indicate that there was trouble somewhere. When he was bleeding the lines for the fourth time I caught the trouble red-handed. He was failing to keep the reservoir at least half filled when going through the process.

Why is it that so many drivers will reach for the hand brake the instant they become aware that the engine has stalled? Isn't it true that in cases of such a stall the car usually is moving along, and if it is power the driver needs why does he want to stop? Why not just let the car drift along and set the starter-motor into action? And if the engine won't start why not just engage the clutch and let the starter-motor pull the car off to the side of the road, off the railroad crossing or out of whatever situation the car is in? The starter-motor in this way. Actually it is one of the greatest safety devices.

Black Market Gas?

As many buyers of black market gasoline have discovered the chief trouble with such fuel is that it has so many other ingredients added. Kerosene is the usual fuel used to boost the quantity, although tests have shown just about everything else. I recently heard of a tank wagon filled with cleaning fluid. Its contents went into a filling station pump.

You can tell if there is kerosene in the fuel by putting a little of it on your hand. It just doesn't have that drying, volatile feel of gasoline. If the engine has been kicking up trouble disconnect the fuel line to the pump and feed the engine some good gasoline of known quality by gravity to the float bowl. Immediate improvement means that the tank is full of poor gas or gas diluted with too much kerosene.

Just looking at a sample of engine oil as it clings to the dip stick is no way to judge its quality. Even rubbing it between your fingers has little value as a test. The trick is to hold the stick over a piece of blotting paper and let oil drip down and spread out. This serves to break up the oil into its components. Oil men say that if a gray center remains the oil isn't being properly filtered. It's a tip to change the cartridge of the oil filter.

Rough on the Car
Certain highway conditions are especially bad for automobiles, but risk of breakage can be reduced by greater skill in driving. For instance, never apply the brakes when the car is going into a chuck hole. It is hard enough for the springs to withstand the shock of a wheel dropping into the hole without added too late..

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear mother-in-law who passed away April 7, 1944.

Often to our heart comes a bitter cry.

Why, oh, why did our loved ones die.

Then comes the answer so softly and sweet.

She is not dead she is only asleep.

Sleep on my dear one take your rest.

We loved you dearly but God loved you best.

Daughter-in-law, Mrs. Herman Kuykendall.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Mrs. O. J. Kuykendall who died April 7, 1944.

We who loved her, sadly miss her.

And who hold her ever dear.

And in lonely hours of thinking Often feel her presence near.

Not dead to those who loved her.

Not lost but gone before.

She lives with us in memory And will for evermore.

By her Husband and Children.

Chapter 2

"No, you are not through with the store, Christopher," there was an unrelenting determination in her voice that he instinctively resented. "The time has come for you to take up your responsibilities there, just as your father and grandfather did before you."

"We'll not go into family history, either," Christopher interrupted irritably. "I'm fed up with that too—if you must know, I'll decide what my responsibilities are and what I shall do with them. I'm through letting other people run my life."

Two pairs of brown eyes stared at each other across the length of the room. They were curiously alike—the shrewd old eyes and the resentful young eyes. Something about sure and stubborn marked the rather striking family resemblance between these two. Genevieve Humbert signed and then deliberately ended one row of knitting and started another. Christopher knew she had something more to say. He'd have to hear it some time, he might as well stay and take it now—nothing stopped the Duchess once she got on the beam.

"I attended the stockholders' meeting at the store this morning," the Duchess said firmly. You should have been there. They sent out a call for you, but no one could find you. All the officers were re-elected and a new vice president and general merchandise manager named."

"They'd have to do that. White has gone into the Navy. They have to have a man to fill his place."

Suddenly the Duchess dropped her knitting and leaned forward, with a single eager gesture. When she spoke there was an overtone of excitement in her voice that vaguely bothered him.

"I want to be the first to congratulate you, Christopher. They elected you first vice president and general merchandise manager. I have hoped for this for a long, long time."

"Me—they elected ME—general merchandise manager—" Christopher stared at her in blank amazement. "Why that's impossible!"

Sheer incredulity crowded out every other consideration, as he looked at her in bewildered silence. The thing was unreal, fantastic. They never put young men in a position like that, and he was just twenty-six.

At last he said in a low voice, "I can't qualify for a position like that."

"You qualified all right with the stockholders," the Duchess rejoined calmly.

For the first time that evening, Christopher smiled. His aunt was one of the store's largest stockholders. So her "hopes" had probably been a deciding factor in the surprising and unprecedented action taken that morning.

"But my dear Duchess," Christopher insisted. "I am thinking of the hard boiled gentlemen on our board. They'd never vote a dollar for anything without a written guarantee of five coming back! No, it's all cock-eyed. It doesn't make sense. Besides," he added more soberly, as he saw the worried look on his aunt's face, "a position like that would tie me to the store for life, and I have other plans. I'm going away."

He eyed her levelly for a moment, then he said quickly, "I think a

Mrs. Betty J. Creekmore and Miss Patricia Booser, who have been spending some time at the George Dunstan home, R. 1, spent a part of the week in Baltimore attending the operatic performances at the Lyric theatre.

Seaman Bernard Moore was on leave with his wife and children during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hale and children have moved from this section to the York Springs district.

A class of children of St. Mary's Catholic church will receive their first Holy Communion at the 7:30 mass Sunday morning. This mass will be a high mass, while there will be a low mass at 10 a. m.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY
A doctor's love for a girl whose husband he believes is a killer is the dramatic situation upon which RKO Radio's new mystery thriller, "Experiment Perilous," is based.

Starring Hedy Lamarr, George Brent and Paul Lukas, the film is an adaptation of Margaret Carpenter's novel which was a Literary Guild selection.

Brent has the role of the doctor who, interested in the wife of a wealthy philanthropist, learns of certain significant and sinister happenings in her life. Miss Lamarr as the wife, is kept a virtual prisoner by her prominent husband, Paul Lukas.

WEDNESDAY
You'll have to go far to find more novel or better film entertainment than the Wednesday offering at the Majestic theatre where the management has booked "The Good Old Days," a merry melange of old time tidbits and parade of yesterday's stars, brightly put together to give full value for your admission fee. This corner goes "all out" in recommending "The Good Old Days" to every member of the family.

The cast reads like the "Who's Who" of early filmdom—Mary Pickford, Doug. Fairbanks, Rudolph Valentino, Tom Mix, Francis X. Bushman, John Bunny, William S. Hart and Clara Kimball Young are but a few of the stars of yesterday who can be seen again to renew memories of the years gone by.

THURSDAY
The newest Andrews Sisters film, Universal's "Her Lucky Night," which co-stars them with Martha O'Driscoll and Noah Berry, Jr., is due next Thursday at the Majestic theatre.

In it the famous trio will be heard singing those Hit Parade songs, "Is You Is, Or Is You Ain't Ma' Baby," "Straighten Up and Fly Right" and "Dance With a Dolly With a Hole in Her Stocking." In addition, the girls also sing two other numbers, "Sing a Tropical Song" and "The Polka Polka," both topnotchers, too.

Friday and Saturday

Alan Hale, one of the stars who appear in "Hotel Berlin."

Revealing startling secret plans of the German general staff for eventual conquest of the world in some future war, Warner's "Hotel Berlin" opens at the Majestic theatre with a five-star cast headed by Faye Emerson, Raymond Massey, Andrea King, Peter Lorre and Helmut Dantine.

"Hotel Berlin" is the amazing story of German treachery and deadly intrigue laid against the glittering backdrop of a cosmopolitan hotel. It is the thunder-packed drama that has been hidden behind the Westwall for more than five years of total war, brought to the public at last as a compelling and provocative motion picture.

'FRISCO PARLEY
NEW BID IN OLD HUNT FOR PEACE

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, April 7 (AP)—The San Francisco conference — where the United Nations will try to build a league to prevent war—is just the latest bid in man's old hunt for peace.

If this one fails, others have failed. The idea and the hope are not new. The Greeks had a league 500 years before Christ. It lasted a good while. It died at last.

When a member of that league got rambunctious, the others pounced on it, just as the members of the San Francisco league would do. It had a council and an assembly, just as the San Francisco league would have.

Proposed Arbitration

Back in the 14th century the poet Dante wanted to see all western Christian nations united under one ruler. Frenchman Emerig Crue in 1623 proposed international arbitration as a means of settling disputes.

He suggested more freedom in trading across frontiers (just as our Secretary of State Stettinius does) and religious toleration (just as the Atlantic charter does).

To him a war anywhere was the concern of all men because "human society is a body all of whose members have a common sympathy, so that it is impossible that the sickness of one shall not be communicated to the others."

Peace Plans of Past

All the proposals for peace can't be given here, but here are some:

In 1693 the Quaker, William Penn, wanted an international congress to settle disputes. He suggested that if any nation refused to abide by the congress' ruling, the others would unite their armies against it. Which is what the San Francisco league would do.

Under Penn's plan the Congress would be made up of delegates and the vote would be by a majority of seven, just as proposed for the security council of the new league's security council.

John Oellers, another Quaker, followed Penn's lead in 1710 with an idea for an international parliament to solve disputes and Jean Jacques Rousseau, French philosopher of the 18th century, wanted a permanent peace tribunal.

Plans, Plans, Plans

In the 19th century Francois Rene Chateaubriand, French writer and a leader in the reaction against the French Revolution, suggested a European tribunal to judge nations and prevent wars.

In the same 19th century English philosophers—James Mill, the father, and John Stuart Mill, the son—supported the idea of world peace. James Mill suggested an international tribunal with power to impose sanctions.

Back in 1785 John Hay, American secretary of foreign affairs, gave the idea of international arbitration a sturdy boost when he suggested it to Congress. Congress did nothing.

But in 1795 Hay had a chance to put his ideas into practice by negotiating treaties with Great Britain. Hay's work has been regarded as the foundation stone in American arbitration policies.

In 1828 an American peace society was formed. It wanted a congress of nations. All through the 19th century the idea kept popping up.

There were two peace conferences at the Hague in Holland—1899 and 1907—although they didn't get very far.

Then came the first World War and in the first two years of that war various organizations arose to demand peace. One of them was the league to enforce peace.

York Springs

York Springs—John Hinkle, who has been a surgical patient at the Hanover hospital for some time, is reported not much improved. He has undergone two operations.

Soft Coal Operators Appeal For WLB Help

Washington, April 7 (AP)—Bituminous operators appealed to the War Labor Board today for help in writing a new contract as talks with the union collapsed and wildcat stoppages in "captive" mines became critical.

The producers, who said yesterday they would not attend this morning's scheduled meeting with John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers' committee, decided to be present but added, "it doesn't mean anything."

The Army recently purchased 18,000 plastic harmonicas.
